RABBI'S MESSAGE

Is it ok to question G-d? Does that indicate that they have no faith? Perhaps a true believer would never have any questions.

Over the last few weeks we've been reading about several conversations that went on between G-d and Moses - the first leader and redeemer of the Jewish people. The portion of Va'eira opens in the middle of a conversation between them. After he had approached Pharaoh with G-d's message "Let My people go so they may serve Me" the result was an unbearable increase in their suffering to the point that Moshe himself complained to G-d: "O L-rd! Why have You harmed this people? Why have You sent me? Since I have come to Pharaoh to speak in Your name, he has harmed this people, and You have not saved Your people."

That's right. Moshe, the greatest prophet to ever live and the one credited for transmitting G-d's Torah to us for all time, had questions! And he made sure to ask them. Instead of being angered or disappointed with his questions, G-d responded by communicating the greatest blessings and promises for redemption which materialized shortly thereafter.

Questions are not a challenge to faith. On the contrary, questions are the greatest confirmation of faith.

In the aftermath of the Holocaust, Noble Laureate Elie Wiesel wrestled with faith and even considered never starting a family. Why bring children into such a terrible world, he wondered. He had several lengthy conversations with the Rebbe in this regard. In 1965 the Rebbe composed a letter to him on the topic of faith after the Holocaust and specifically persuaded him to start a family. Here is a powerful excerpt:

"I believe you will agree with me that it isn't happenstance that all of the authentic questioners kept their faith; indeed, it is impossible for it to have been otherwise. For if the question is sincerely meant and arises from a genuine concern for justice and righteousness, then it is obvious that such a deep feeling can only come from the conviction that true justice and righteousness must originate in a supernatural source, one that is above human understanding and feelings."

Don't be frightened by your questions. Search for answers in the right places and the journey will lead you to true personal redemption, which paves the way for the ultimate redemption through Moshiach.

Letters:

Just a note of thanks for all you do; your visit after my eye surgery with the beautiful bouquet of hydrangea, your kindness when we had Covid, and yummy treats for a quick recovery. Thank you for your kindness and your friendship.

Marilyn & Harvey Groden

Rabbi, thank you for coming to our home to say some blessings for my husband. Your boys added a bit of levity to the occasion. I really appreciate your Kindness.

Barbara Rosenthal

Thank you so much for sending someone to the hospital with my favorite foods. Thank you for the prayers to help me heal. I am doing much better slowly and starting PT. Thank G-d! You are all so caring and hope to see you soon.

Wendy Cooley

Dear Friends, thank you for your recent contributions to the Synagogue in honor of the birth of Shimshon David Botnick to Brian Botnick and Alex Forke. Your thoughtfulness is very much appreciated.

19 KISLEV - WOMEN'S EVENT

Our 26th annual Day of Jewish Mysticism - celebrated the "19th of Kislev" through the lens of Love and Unity.

We are each a part of One Soul which bonds us in immeasurable ways. We are lucky to see this bond in our Akron community, and with our brethren in Israel and worldwide.

Many women added a new Mezuzah scroll in their homes using their stunning Resin Mezuzah cases they made. Each Mezuzah we put up in our homes adds protection to our brethren worldwide.

Much appreciation to our speakers, singers, candle lighters, cooks, photographers, and all who planned, volunteered, and attended. A special thank you to Mazal Cohen for spearheading this event each year.
